Quieter in Japan
The Concept of Nations
Henry Crows in His Bottle
If Stalin Should Go
By Arthur Brisbane

Japan's troubles have subsided, with no defect of the revolutionary forces. They may be permitted to name the prime minister in place of one murdered, Japan wants peace, Japanese officers want war and glory. They will probably have the former, more, perhaps, than they desire.

On Japanese general, Sadao Araki, supposed to control the Army revolutionists, believes Japan's people are of divine origin. Many nations have that opinion, some that go far back even before the Christian era, but Japan's opinion is more particular and liked better than any other nation.

The little Arabian ruler of Ethiopia calls himself "Negus Negus," says he is "King of Kings." Dozens of barbarous potentates each think themselves most important ruler on the globe. Chinese called leaders "The Middle Kingdom," believing that it occupied actually the middle of the earth, a desirable role.

Wise old China watches, with concern but not despair, the developments in Japan. If Japanese militarists gain control, that will be bad for China, now. But China, having long endured invasion and distress, looks back over five thousand years and says:

If Japanese military revolutionists gain control, Japan's empire will end in ruin. Old China has survived many proud conquerors. Babylon fell and Tyre was destroyed, China was already old.

At Dallas, Texas, Mrs. Crows owns the rooster named Henry, living in a five-gallon bottle. Put in when ten days old, Henry is now too big to get out, and the Humane Society wants to do something. Mrs. Crows says:

GIRL PICKET STABBED 6 HELD IN STRIKE

Police Quell Renewed Outbreak in Downtown Garment Center

A girl picketer was stabbed and six persons seized by police today as violence flared anew in Boston's garment strike.

Despite a heavy detail of police, the stabbing occurred in Kneeland street as an auto drove up to factory building where the victim worked.

The victim, Miss Tillie Codah, 21 Townsend street, Roxbury, was treated at a nearby dispensary for a stab wound beside the left eye. She then accompanied officers to the Warren avenue station to view a suspect.

International News Service

Washington, Feb. 23.—President Roosevelt will ask Congress to raise the income tax by $1,000,000,000 in permanent new taxes to replace the temporary taxes to make up for money lost during the current fiscal year.

The President also disclosed that the administration hopes to impose a "windfall tax" on AAA processing taxes recovered through court action.

The Governor declared that certain lawyers had sent for some of the applicants and offered to get them appointed for $1000 each.

He did not name the lawyers. Their action, he said, were an attempt to defraud the applicants, inasmuch as they could not dictate the appointments nor influence the selection.

A total of 945 men, many of them members of the state police uniformed force and other police departments throughout the state, took the examination for the state detective division. Twenty-five are to be appointed.

"My attention has been directed to the fact that certain men who have taken the civil service examination for state detective have been approached and asked to contribute to certain individuals in return for their appointment as detectives," said the governor.

Washington, Feb. 23 (AP)—In a five to four decision, the Interstate Commerce Commission today ordered a reduction in basic rail passenger fares from 3.5 cents a mile to 2 cents a mile.

The commission ordered a reduction in Pullman rates to 3 cents a mile. These rates now average 4 cents.

Under the order, the new fares will be effective June 2.

The order revised the passenger fare structure throughout the country, but because western and southern roads already have instituted low experimental fares the effect will fall on the eastern roads.

Washington, Feb. 23 (INS)—Bipartisan demand for a public inquiry into the removal of Major General Johnson Hagood from command of the Eighth Corps Area for criticizing government expenditure, increased today with Republican denouncing it as an illustration of an administration "rule of terror" against critics of its policies.

Administration spokesmen sought to quiet the storm, apparently in the belief President Roosevelt planned some conciliatory move to end the controversy. This was hinted in a number of quarters.

Meanwhile, General Hagood explained Chief of Staff Glegg that he had resigned his command to Major General Henry W. Butler, commanding officer of Fort Sill, Okla., his next ranking subordinate in the Eighth Corps Area.

Hagood also requested permission to remain in San Antonio, Tex., a month to clear up his reports as commanding officer of the Eighth Corps Area, and to wind up personal affairs. The request was granted.

A "Hagood" telegram was in accordance with the war department's instructions that he quit his command and return to his Charleston, S. C. home to "await orders" which were mailed him earlier in the week.

Senator Metcalf (R) of Rhode Island, denouncing Hagood's removal as "unwarranted terrorism," called on the Senate military affairs committee today to act promptly on his resolution, proposing a Senate inquiry into the affair.

GENERAL REMOVED

Hagood, distinguished for brilliant war and peace-time service, was removed from his command as punishment for criticizing administration spending before a House appropriations subcommittee.

He charged money was squandered in useless, temporary projects and refused for worthy permanent public works.

A new controversy may develop over the War Department's action in replacing Hagood with Major-General Charles D. Kilbourne, who only recently joined the State Department to make a public apology to Canada.

Kilbourne got into trouble by advocating construction of a huge secret air base on the North Atlantic coast for the purpose of seeing Canadian islands as air bases in time of war.

RAPS KILBOURNE

Senator Clark (D) of Missouri, while upholding the removal of Hagood, protested against the Kilbourne appointment.

"The recent events in Japan justify our strict rule that army officers must not engage in politics of any description," said Clark. "I don't see what could have been done under this rule other than to remove General Hagood."

"At the same time, I consider it a paradox to replace Hagood with General Kilbourne, who while as much out of turn that our government was forced to make a public apology to Canada."

Senator Byrnes (D) of South Carolina, and Representative McSwain (D) also of South Carolina, were unsuccessful after a call on Secretary of War Dern in protest against Hagood's removal.

Hagood is a native of South Carolina and son of a distinguished Confederate general.

McSwain gave some weight though to rumors of an improper compromise. He said he felt everything would be smoothed after "we have time to cool off."

AUTHORITY TO SPEAK

Representative Bolton (R) of Ohio, senior minority member of the subcommittee which heard Hagood, meanwhile revealed the general had been given special authority to "speak freely" at the hearing.

"General Hagood was invited to speak his mind freely," said Bolton. "In fact, he was told to do so by the chairman of our subcommittee (Rep. Parks (D) of Arkansas)."

"General Hagood had full knowledge of the letter to Representative Craig, chief of staff, giving him the right to speak freely. I don't believe he had any intention of reflecting upon any superior officer in the army but was merely speaking his mind freely, as he had been asked to do."

There was a feeling in some Republican circles that General Craig, who assumed full responsibility for Hagood's removal, acted under pressure. This was intimated by Senator Metcalf, who said:

"I am unable to say whether General Craig is being used to hide the mailed fist of terrorism, but I am informed that the matter was discussed in cabinet meeting long before the order removing General Hagood was issued."

DERN UNKNOWN

Secretary of War George H. Dern, it was learned, does not intend to reinstate Hagood or otherwise modify his order removing the veteran army officer from his command.

The army also stood pat on the disciplinary action taken against the outspoken commander.

It does not intend to reinstate him or modify its action against him unless directed to do so by President Roosevelt himself.

The view prevails within the army high command that to take a "change of heart" now, especially

SECRETARY'S OFFICE

DEC 10 1935

WAR DEPARTMENT

Honorable George Henry Dern,

Secretary of War,

Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. Secretary:

Our committee, which frames the Army Supply bill, will, during our hearings to begin on December 10th, have before us as witnesses General Brown, General Hunt, General Malone, General Hagood and other prominent officers of the Army.

From long experience I understand what restrictions are usually placed by the Department on Army officers when they testify before a congressional committee, which once is to be fully handicapped the committee in getting first-hand information about matters with which they are vitally concerned.

With regard to the above mentioned four distinguished Major Generals, our committee will want to feel free to ask them questions that will elicit full, free and frank answers, unobscured and uncontrolled by any restrictions that anyone in your department could place upon them, and I desire to request of you that no such restrictions be placed upon them. If a sentence or a congressional restriction can't ask a distinguished Major General in our Army a question and have the benefit of that officer's frank answer, based upon his judgment and experience, then there is something vitally wrong with our set-up.

Please write me at my Washington office whether my request will be granted.

Very sincerely yours,

THOMAS L. BLANTON

REPRESENTATIVE BLANTON'S LETTER TO WAR SECRETARY DERN

These two letters are playing an important role in the controversy now raging over the ouster of Major-General Hagood. To the left, is the letter of Representative Blanton to Secretary of War Dern requesting the appearance of Hagood and other generals before the House Appropriations Committee. To the right, is the letter of Chief of Staff Malin Craig instructing Representative Blanton that the officers mentioned "will be instructed by me in person that they are to answer you FREELY, FULLY AND FRANKLY and that there are no RESTRICTIONS whatever placed upon their appearance before your committee by the War Department."

Removal Due to Charge
Of Government Waste

By GEORGE ROTHWELL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—It was General Hagood's exposure of extravagance that caused additional wrath and not his reference to WPA funds as "stage money," a mere figure of speech.

In testifying he gave the House subcommittee on appropriations information for which it had asked.

It was interference of the Executive Department with a prerogative of Congress—to obtain information from witnesses as an intelligent basis of legislation that has made the issue not one between the New Deal and General Hagood, but between the New Deal and Congress. Herein lies the seriousness of the blunder which the President, presumably advised by subordinates, has made.

GIVEN OUT BY BOAR

It has been made to appear that General Hagood gave out information he disclosed to the House committee. He did not.

The information, over which the administration relieved the Army officer as Corps Commander at San Antonio and ordered him to his home, was given out by the House Committee itself. That committee is controlled by Democrats. They would have asked the General to revise his remarks, and doubtless he would have. But the committee permitted his testimony to stand, presumably because they approved it.

General Hagood made his position clear when on December 17 he testified, stating that he was not present as an advocate, nor to urge appropriations, but merely as a witness to "answer questions as to the needs of my command."

COMMONLY KNOWN

What got under the New Dealers was the statement of the kind of waste which everywhere under the alphabetical setup has been commonly known. He said:

"Of the money so far allotted to the Army, I have seen $100,000,000 go to the pockets of a few men."

Army Ready to Fire, People Warned from Area

London, Feb. 28 (AP)—Indications that Japanese forces are about to open fire on the beleaguered Tokyo rebels were given in a threatening radio broadcast by the Japanese government today, Exchange Telegraph said.

"Forceful measures will be taken against those numbers of the army falling completely to submit to authority," the government broadcaster said.

He advised people living near the official residence of the premier to "remove to temporarily safer quarters," which was taken to mean that bullets soon will be flying in that section.

A special order to all commanding officers to hold themselves in readiness for "any possible emergency" accompanied the broadcast. The Japanese people were told to "refrain from participating in any action against the state."

Rebels Violate Deadline, Defy Army to Rout Them

By GLENN BABB

Ceylan, 1936, by the Associated Press. Tokyo, February 28.—Lieut. Gen. Kamei Kishu, assigned by the government to lead down a military rebellion with martial law, announced tonight that his forces, surrounding the rebels, were taking appropriate measures to deal with them.

The troops under the command of martial law are acting under orders from the emperor, their discipline is strict and their morale excellent.

"Tokyo day, except for the Nagasaki section, is perfectly calm while peace and order prevail throughout the country."

The "disturbances" to which he referred were the countrywide strikes of the nation's leading electric utilities in a sudden attempt to overthrow the government.

DEATH DEADLINE

The soldiers concerned faced the deadline set for their return to their own barracks and held ground in the heart of Tokyo.

Breaking their agreement in advance by 8 a. m. the central points they seized in their swift coup at dawn Wednesday, 1000 rebels maintained their grip on government buildings against a force of more than 4000 loyal troops.

In this tense atmosphere, the Dome Agency announced new negotiations for a peaceful return of the insurgents to their quarters, were opened between rebel leaders, and officers of the martial law administration at the official residence of the premier, headquarters of the uprising.

EMPEROR SEEKS PREMIER

Emperor Hirohito presided in negotiations for a new government to replace that of the assassinated Premier Kamei Kishu, with the imperial princes and officers of the army high command now wielding the predominating influences.

Under the insistence of the insurgents that their military ideal of government be fulfilled, Gen. Radoo Araki, "strong man," former minister of war and idol of the troops, was mentioned widely for the Premiership.

An unconfirmed report from Tokyo to Shanghai through diplomatic channels said General Araki had established a military dictatorship. No indications were reported, however, of any attack yet on the rebel positions.

The government, still conducted nominally by former Home Minister Puma Goto as acting premier, was declared authoritatively to be hopeful of a bloodless settlement.

AMERICANS WARNED AWAY

A heavy west snow was falling, and government officials hoped it would dampen the ardor of the insurgents.

Several Americans, who reported to the United States embassy that their movements had been restricted, were advised to remain at home until the trouble was ended.

Thus far, no Americans had been harmed in the rebellion which brought death to four liberal elder statesmen.

The rebels, in addition to the premier's residence, held the Peers' Club, the Koraku Restaurant, the Sanno Hotel—all in the center of the capital. Several American tourists were elected politely but firmly from the hotel.

The insurgents apparently were drawn principally from the first and third infantry regiments of the first army division, known as the Tokyo division.

Leading the enlisted men in Captain Tetsuo Ando, it is believed, with the others of the four young officers who commanded sections of the coup reported to be Captain Ichitatsu Yamaguchi, Captain Kiyosada Koda and Lieutenant Yasufusa Kuribara.

A total of seven companies were helped affected by the uprising, a small number of artillery men and tank corps men joining the disaffected infantry regiments.

Against these forces were ranged other regiments of the First Division itself which had not entertained sympathy with the Fascist sentiment.

About 4000 troops of the 49th Infantry were brought from Kofu, and the 57th Infantry from Sakura, to reinforce the government cordon. Both these regiments are from the First Division.

FLEETS ON GUARD

Other soldiers came from as far away as Takasaki, 70 miles north. The navy, strongly opposed to the rebels who slew three retired admirals, brought its first and second fleets to guard the straits of Tokyo and Osaka, on the southern end of the main island.

The first vessels recalled from overseas stations assumed positions in the Tokyo Harbor today, out of sight of shore.

Admiral Mineo Osami, minister of the navy, called a conference of the highest naval authorities while a landing force of bluejackets, which concentrated at the navy office, was reinforced by parties from units of the first fleet, anchored in Tokyo Bay, off Tokyo.

A military or Fascist government seemed to appear in prospect early in the conduct of the third day's tense negotiations.

Mental Case Study For Arson Suspect

Edwin Harrigan, 17, of Cypress street, Newton, brilliant Newton Trade School student, was ordered committed for 30 days' observation to Western State Hospital following his arraignment in Newton Court today on arrest charges in connection with fires in his home and at the Trade School.

The case was continued by Judge W. Lloyd Allen until April 6.

HITLER EAGER TO PROFIT BY FRENCH O. K.

Berlin, Feb. 28 (AP)—Germany's denunciation of the Locarno Treaty, thereby cutting her loose from the French-sponsored arrangement for maintaining the western European frontiers left by the World War, will be Chancellor Hitler's first answer to ratification of the Franco-Soviet pact, it was learned today.

Hitler is biding his time and awaiting the right opportunity to rear up the Locarno Treaty. He is standing pat on his contention that France's new link with the Soviet Union, approved yesterday by the French Chamber of Deputies, is a military alliance and a flagrant violation of the Locarno Treaty that automatically nullifies its value.

In a series of agreements signed at Locarno ten years ago, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, and Belgium bound themselves to respect the integrity of their post-war frontiers and to submit differences to arbitration.

DR. ROSENBERG TALKS

When and where Hitler will strike back remained an unfathomed secret today, but those close to the chancellor stated they are convinced he will weigh and measure every step before acting.

The progress of Hitler's reported moves to build a central European bloc of states around Germany, with Italy and Poland the corner stones, may be the deciding factor.

A grim hint that Hitler will "remember" yesterday's vote in Paris was given Universal Service by Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, director of Nazi party foreign policy who regarded in some quarters as Hitler's behind-the-scenes foreign minister. Rosenberg stated:

"Man's will is heaven; also his hell. Men have often burned their bridges. But it seems they did not learn their lesson from that. That's all I have got to say about ratification of the Franco-Soviet pact."

VOYE SHOCKS NAZIS

According to one current rumor, Hitler is planning to summon the Reichstag and formally denounce the Locarno Treaty.

According to another rumor, he will send the German Army into the Rhineland, March 16, to celebrate the first anniversary of his denunciation of the disarmament provisions of the Treaty of Versailles.

"Forceful measures will be taken," the government broadcaster said. He advised people living near the official residence of the premier—one of the rebel strongholds—"to remove to temporarily safer quarters."

China Fears New War

Nanking, Feb. 28 (AP)—China's military political leaders, meeting in an emergency session, advocated today resolute preparations for national defense in the face of a threatening renewal of Japanese military pressure.

'All Quiet,' Envoy Told

San Francisco, Feb. 28 (AP)—Shu Tomii, Japanese consul general, said he received a cablegram from Tokyo today declaring order to be "rapidly restored." Military authorities and the Kodokai (youthful official) agreed, he said, the latter would withdraw to their original regiments.

Censor Rules News

New York, Feb. 28 (AP)—Tokyo dispatches to the Associated Press indicated a severe censorship was renewed today after the Japanese situation again became acute. While measures came freely after the rebellious soldiers agreed to yield, a sharp curtailment was evident when the troops refused to return to barracks.

Tangled

Canandaigua, N. Y., Feb. 28 (AP)—Martin Davey, 25, of Buffalo, was wandering today how to break the news to his boss that his truck collided with itself.

The steering rod of his trailer truck broke, the truck went out of control, the trailer coupling broke and the two parts of the machine collided and overturned in a ditch.

Davey expects to be out of the hospital in a few days.

FRANCE STAMPS SOVIET PACT AS 'VITAL'

Paris, Feb. 28 (AP)—Defying warning signals raised in Germany and Italy, French officials today stood by the action of the Chamber of Deputies in overwhelmingly ratifying the Franco-Soviet pact, a military alliance of the two largest armies and air forces in Europe, one that threatens to divide the continent into two armed camps.

The Chamber vote of approval, 553 to 161, showed under opponents of the pact who argued that should the threatened war between Russia and Japan break in the Far East, France would be left alone to face Germany.

Stronger opposition to ratification was expected in the Senate, where the pact, an agreement of mutual military aid against an aggressor, now goes for approval that will become final upon President Le Brun's signature.

DISREGARDS HITLER

The Chamber furthermore disregarded Chancellor Hitler's counter-measures to enlist Italy, Poland, Yugoslavia, Austria, Hungary and Rumania in a counter-alliance against France and Russia in answer to ratification of the pact, a move that has met favorable reception from Premier Mussolini.

In the feverish debate, broken by wild applause, that preceded the chamber's vote, there was no effort to make France's belief that Russia's army of 1,300,000 men under arms, and her air force could be the deciding factor in a Franco-German war. In a ringing speech after the ratification, Pierre Cot, former Minister of Air, told the chamber:

"We believe in the strength of the Russian army because the French General Staff does."

Russia's military air force includes 5000 planes that are ready for action. Her military air force is the most powerful in the world, and Russia does not need a common frontier with Germany to be effective.

AIRPLANE TRANSPORTS

"In the last air maneuvers, French army officers saw Russian airplanes pick up light tanks, artillery pieces, and a whole regiment of men and put them down behind the enemy's lines."

"In the maneuvers, 97 Russian planes carried four battalions of infantry, sixteen cannons four armored cars four tanks and four liaison cars over the enemy's head, dropping them behind the lines."

Davey expects to be out of the hospital in a few days.

...MILLIONS SAY COBBS CREEK IS WHAT WE SAY IT IS... Mild!

See this cigarette? it's MILD - That's what I want in my Whisky!

STRENGTH APLENTY yet smooth enough to sip!

NOW enjoy in your whisky what you get in your cigarette - mildness! For here's whisky that doesn't have to be gulped - there isn't a harsh edge in its make-up. Nor a shudder either. In fact, Cobbs Creek is so mild - so smooth - that you can actually sip it as you would a fine old French brandy. That's a rare trait in a modest-priced whisky. Yet its 90 proof tells you that it's got all the buoyant warmth you want... and, like your cigarette, its enjoyment is inexpensive. Call for Cobbs Creek - and you call for whisky mildness!

DRAGER DENIES SHE WAS DRUNK DURING KILLING

There was a pause between the two shots that rang out in the Alton house of Mrs. Grace Prior the October morning that George A. Frame was shot fatally, it was testified in Suffolk court today.

Mrs. Charlotte Dearborn of Commonwealth avenue, Allston, one of the women who had been in the house at what the government contends was a gay drinking party, gave this testimony.

Assistant District Attorney Francis J. Hickey had testimony from Mrs. Dearborn her story of the party and the shooting in detail examinations. Recalling her by assistant.

"How many shots did you hear?"

"I'm sure there were two," she replied.

TRIAL OF PAUSE

"Was there any pause between the two shots?"

As Mrs. Dearborn replied, Defense Counsel Herbert J. Callahan started in rise, but she completed her answer. It was:

"There was a pause between the shots."

Mrs. Prior, who is being tried for manslaughter in the death of her son, had been described previously by her sister, Miss Louise Bond, as having been in a half-fainting position after the shot.

Frame was stretched on the third floor, where he had been previously described as lying, Louis Bond.

Mrs. Prior's brother, Louis Bond, had been described as the trigger mechanism of the fatal pistol had been fired down to examine the evidence for target practice.

Bond was recalled today by Hickey and asked one question:

"Was the gun cocked or unloaded when you left there?" (Bond had testified he put the pistol in a holster and left it in a closet).

DENIES BEING DRUNK

Bond answered:

"To my knowledge it wasn't cocked that morning."

When Mrs. Dearborn, a dignified middle-aged woman, took the stand, she was very emphatic in stating that she was sober during the party preceding the shooting.

She also testified that she had been drinking. She wanted the matter "recalled."

Mrs. Dearborn answered the state's questions in a soft voice, sitting very erect in the witness chair. She was clad in black. She had a habit of running her lips before and after speaking.

She said that she was in the kitchen when her husband called her into the dining room then, she said, but it was not in the dining room.

She maintained that she had seen any gun in Mrs. Prior's hand. She testified:

"When I heard the shots I turned and went out the back door. I saw Grace, without hat or coat, running in the yard."

Prosecutor Hickey asked her:

"Did you see any gun?"

The witness replied emphatically:

"No."

Q—Did you see Louise Bond (sister of the defendant) there?

Only when she rushed down stairs. I didn't see what she did.

Q—Where was the mother at the time of the shooting?

In the kitchen.

When Defense Counsel Callahan took Mrs. Dearborn in cross-examination she testified:

"It had been to a cafe with some of the women the night before the shooting. I had nothing to drink at the cafe. My daughter had a glass of beer there."

"ABSOLUTELY SOBER"

Q—You take brandy, don't you?

Q—As a matter of fact, your daughter was very drunk, wasn't she?

Q—As she got that way at Mrs. Bond's house?

Q—You were sober, weren't you?

At this point, Mrs. Dearborn looked inquiringly toward Hickey and the judge and inquired:

"May I speak?"

Since no one objected she spoke:

"I must have this thing recalled."

Callahan took his turn at look-

Wed on Ship After Cruise Romance

Greenwich, Conn., Feb. 28 (AP)—The gentle tapping of waves against the sturdy hull of the "Tanager" provided the only nuptial music today when pretty Betty Schuyler became the bride of Ronald T. Wentworth, a young man of 22, who had been in a two-year "round-the-world" cruise.

Rev. Minot C. Morgan, D.D., pastor of the first Presbyterian church, officiated at the brief informal ceremony aboard the 32-foot schooner "Tanager," anchored in Greenwich harbor.

Neither friends nor relatives were present, only Captain Irving L. Johnson, of Gloucester, Mass., and his wife, who skipped the Yankee on her 32,000-mile cruise.

Miss Schuyler, 27, graduate of Smith college and socially prominent in Rochester, N. Y., met Wentworth, 22, a young man of 22, who had been in a two-year "round-the-world" cruise.

According to testimony at her trial, her letter was serving a state prison sentence.

ing inquiring and said:

"You don't like it because somebody said you were drunk?"

"That is it," the witness replied. "I recall having someone say that I was drunk."

"I don't say you were drunk," Callahan offered.

"Louise Bond said I was," was Mrs. Dearborn's reply.

Talks Self Out, Then Into Jail

John H. McLaughlin, 37, of Green street, Boston, talked himself out and into jail today in East Cambridge District Court.

Arrested earlier on charges of drunkenness, McLaughlin, who said he is an investigator for a Boston street, pleaded not guilty and proceeded to set forth an argument which court officials said would have been a credit to any attorney.

This defense was so well maintained that Judge Louis L. Green, while declining to release McLaughlin, said the defendant would be free tomorrow with a suspended sentence, or on parole.

At this McLaughlin turned in the prisoner's dock, witness said, and began a scurrilous verbal attack against a probation officer, who is reported to have had no connection with the case.

Surviving and still dangerous game as his voice rose steadily in high pitched tones, McLaughlin was sentenced to 30 days for contempt of court, and the drunkenness charge allowed to stand against him for disposal, after he has served his sentence.

'DEALER' SLATE FUGHT BY N. H. DEMOCRATS

The average Democrat in New Hampshire believes the New Deal will not carry that state in the national election because of its failure to live up to the party platform of 1932, according to John Hurley of Manchester on a visit to Boston.

Hurley, at the Democratic national convention of 1932, was chairman of the credential committee. He will run as an unpledged delegate in the First district of New Hampshire and his friends say he will run on slickets if the state ballot law commission reverses itself and orders his name off the ballot.

"The failure of the New Deal to live up to the 1932 platform pledges has unquestionably created a lot of feeling among old-time Democrats," said Mr. Hurley during his visit here. "In New Hampshire the average Democrat today believes that the New Deal will not carry the national election there and it is up to the old time Democrats to get busy and do something that will bring about victory for a real Democratic candidate."

As a Democrat, I don't like the way the New Dealers act. I am making a survey at the present time of all counties in New Hampshire. The New Dealers have in effect been setting up a new party. As a Democrat, I don't like that. Real Democrats are good enough for me any time and all the time.

Chairman Robert Murchie, chairman of the Democratic state committee of New Hampshire, recently protested to the state ballot law commission against the printing of Hurley's name on the ballot.

The commission, after a hearing, ruled against Murchie's contention. The Hurley was not a bona fide resident of New Hampshire.

It made the same ruling in the case of Arthur J. Rutledge of Portsmouth, former candidate for Congress, who was a delegate to the 1928 and 1932 Democratic national conventions.

Murchie made a second protest which will be heard today by the ballot law commission.

Hurley has written a letter to the commission, stating that he refuses to attend today's hearing and stating that the matter has been tried out fairly and squarely and there is no occasion in law or fact for reopening the matter.

Those in close touch with the situation are convinced that the Roosevelt forces in New Hampshire are on desperate that they are endeavoring in use "steam roller" tactics to keep the names of Hurley and Rutledge off the ballot.

If they succeed, friends of Hurley and Rutledge say that both men will undoubtedly run on slickets and win.

SOUTH CAROLINA PROBERS RED PROBE IN WPA SCHOOLS

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 28 (US)—As a result of charges that federal funds are being used to sponsor the teaching of Communism in WPA workers' schools in this state, the South Carolina House of Representatives had today ordered the appointment of a special investigating committee, authorizing it to "take such steps as it deemed necessary" to settle the issue.

The charges grew out of the investigations of Frank C. Waldrop, special correspondent for "Universal Service," who revealed in newspaper articles that taxpayers' money was paying the salaries of WPA officials who openly admitted they taught Communism to workers.

DISCUSSION HEATED

Considerable heated discussion arose when Representative Kendrick, reading from one of Waldrop's articles, charged Communist teachings at a school conducted with WPA funds here last summer.

Representative Adams, referring to Communist teachings, urged that drastic steps be taken "to blot out this mortal poison." The legislator has repeatedly charged that relief funds were not properly distributed in South Carolina.

Speaker Taylor responded by appointing a committee to investigate the allegations and "take such steps as it deemed advisable."

SPONSORED BY WPA FUNDS

Following a thorough investigation of the spread of Communism among industrial and farm sections, Waldrop charged that workers' education in that state, sponsored by WPA funds, was being directed toward Communist lines.

All-Night Session In Commons

London, Feb. 28 (INS)—One hundred weary, dozing members, including four women, were still present in the House of Commons at noon today after an all-night session, during which the government insisted that the House pass various supplementary appropriations despite frequent labor protests.

The discussion was frequently hilarious as speakers called the House's attention to members snoring as they lay stretched out on the back benches.

Thursday's session of the House finally ended at 12:34 p. m.—nearly an hour and a half after Friday's was due to begin.

As a result, Friday's meeting was called off.

NEW HOSPITAL PLAN

3-Cents-a-Day Charge Urged

Establishment of a three-cent-a-day plan for hospital care in Boston was urged upon members of the New England Hospital Conference today by Frank Van Dyck, executive director of the Associated Hospital Service of New York, in an address at the Hotel Huntington.

The plan, which provides for hospitalization for 31 days a year, nursing care, use of operating rooms and laboratories, attracted more than 37,000 members in New York, Van Dyck declared.

"For payments of 90 cents a month, or $10 a year," he said, "members are entitled to hospital care in any of the 171 hospitals in the New York metropolitan area."

Speaking of the growth of this organization which he asserted is on a "non-profit" basis, Van Dyck continued:

"When the three-cent plan began operations in New York last May it was thought that an enrollment of 25,000 the first year would represent satisfactory progress. At the present time we have more than 37,000 members and expect to pass London's (England) first year record of 65,000 members in its Hospital Saving Association."

"There is every reason to believe," he concluded, "that a well-

In an interview with Miss Alice Norwood, director of workers' education for this state, Waldrop pointed out that there are 28 specially trained teachers on the federal payroll there who teach a course described by the director as designed to:

"Free the working classes on the farms and in the factories, of the 'slave' mentality which is pounded into them in general educational courses of the regular school system."

Miss Norwood, Waldrop wrote, has traveled extensively through Russia, studying the Communist program. She admitted he quoted her as saying, that she "admires it tremendously," and wants it adopted in the United States.

"NEW SOCIAL ORDER" It was "to build a new social order," she said, that Miss Norwood said she took charge last summer of the school for 'worse' teachers here. The school is financed by federal funds.

Representative Adams said of the educational program:

"As soon as these poor people find out the facts they will be fighting me. There's no doubt they hate like being misled into supporting Communism, which the rank and file of this state hierarchy hate."

Worcester Fire Loss Is $10,000

Worcester, Feb. 28 (AP)—Fire caused $10,000 damage to the Rialto theater building in the downtown section today.

The blaze started in a market in the first floor of the two-story building, spread to a dry goods store and a bakery. The theater auditorium and several offices were damaged.

Simmons Sophs Plan Luncheon

The sophomore class of Simmons College will hold its annual luncheon at the refectory on the College Campus Saturday.

Ann Lansing of Albany, N. Y., is an address at the Hotel Huntington.

The plan, which provides for hospitalization for 31 days a year, nursing care, use of operating rooms and laboratories, attracted more than 37,000 members in New York, Van Dyck declared.

MANNING FLAYS NEW MACHINE TAX PLAN

Proposals to abolish local taxes on machinery and substitute a flat imposition of 10¢ per $100 valuation on all manufacturing machinery were termed "ridiculous" today by J. Fred Manning of Lynn.

"It is poor legislation at this time when cities and towns are burdened with excessive expense," he said.

"In towns there are 800,000,000 worth of taxable machinery now taxed at a regular rate of $0.04 per $100. If this tax were substituted by the proposed flat per $100 the burden would fall on the really owners.

"The cities and towns would have to make the difference. The legislature should leave the tax question alone entirely. There was never a law passed for corporations that helped the people.

"The present law should be changed so that no corporation can be formed without at least $50,000 paid in capital."

Bandit Suspects Face Arraignment

Following another appearance in the police lineup four men arrested in a South End rooming house Wednesday face arraignment in Superior court today.

A number of men recently held in connection with the murder of a woman and her husband are to be arraigned today.

Police believe the arrests of the suspects will solve many more than the four crimes now attributed to them. They are charged with armed robbery, conspiracy, and illegal possession of firearms and dangerous weapons.

The group was arrested Sunday at 100½ South End street, North End.

Jewish Rally For Refugees Sunday

A Sunday afternoon rally in Hotel Statler will launch an appeal for $25,000 to help thousands of persecuted Jews from Germany, Poland and other European countries to settle in Palestine.

The rally will be sponsored by the Boston workers of the United Palestine Appeal.

Dr. B. M. Seligman, executive director, Associated Jewish Philanthropies, and Mrs. William D. Borah, national chairman, United Palestine Appeal Women's Division, will speak.

I Cut 20 Shaken In Trolley Crash

One passenger was cut by broken glass and 20 others were shaken up when a trolley car and bakery truck collided today on Neponset street near Coffey street, Dorchester.

James Arone, 110 Temple street, Watertown, cut on the wrist, was treated by a doctor living near the scene of the accident.

Mrs. Margaret Dacey, 10 Terrell avenue, Atlantic, became hysterical.

Police said the car operator, Abner Perry of King street, Dorchester, reported he thought he had sufficient clearance to pass the truck.

Powers Candidate For State Delegate

Richard J. Powers of South Boston, today filed nomination papers with the Election Commission as a candidate for delegate to the Democratic state convention from Ward 6, South Boston.

Filth on Stage And Screen

IN 1927, Mae West wrote and produced a play called "Sex" in New York city.

In March, 1927, the play was raided as obscene by the New York police.

Mae West was indicted with her producer and members of the cast.

She was convicted and sentenced to ten days in the workhouse on Welfare Island and fined five hundred dollars.

She served the ten days and paid the fine.

In 1928, Mae West wrote, and acted in a play called "The Drag," which opened in suburban cities.

It was branded as sheer filth and scoured from the stage.

Rewritten by Mae West, it was produced on Broadway as "The Pleasure Man."

The play was raided on the opening night and Mae West, the cast and the producer were arrested.

The trial, which took place in April, 1930, resulted in a hung jury.

WITH this record of police raids, of indictment, conviction, a fine and term in the workhouse on Welfare Island for a criminal offense, Mae West was approached by the moving picture business as a fit subject to introduce into the wholesome homes of the country and present to the young people of clean moral families.

Her screen plays were considered proper by the moving picture fraternity to be shown even on Sunday as a proof of the special advantage of Sunday moving pictures.

It was Miss Mae West's screen plays which were largely responsible for the uprising of the churches and the moral elements of the community against filth in moving pictures, and which resulted in a temporary improvement in moving picture morals.

THE attention of the churches, the women's clubs, the various state censors, the state legislatures, and the Congress of the United States, is called to the fact that Mae West has produced another screen play, which she wrote herself, as she wrote the play called "Sex," which was raided as obscene in New York city and for which she was indicted, convicted, and served her sentence.

The police of the various cities might also find something to interest them in Mae West's latest literary and screen effort, in that the heroine begins the picture as the consort of a Chinaman, and ends as a missionary dividing her lewd affections between a police officer and a ship captain.

The play was produced by Paramount.

The Hearst papers have refused its advertising.

U. S. SEED AID 20 MILLIONS

Washington, Feb. 23 (AP)—President Roosevelt said today he would issue an executive order in the next day or so authorizing use of $20,000,000 for 1936 seed and feed loans to farmers.

Individual loans will be limited to $500. Mr. Roosevelt earlier this week vetoed a $50,000,000 loan bill containing a $500 limit on the grounds, among others, that the measure provided no taxes for the extra-budget outlay.

He said at that time that he would make provision for the loans out of work relief funds.

FIN. COM. ASKS MORE PROBES

The Boston Finance Commission today invited John F. Fitzgerald, president of the City Council and acting mayor, to inform it as to what matters he has knowledge of that it has failed to investigate.

The invitation was a result of a statement by Fitzgerald in which he said: "The Finance Commission has gone to sleep when it has opportunities to save the city real money."

The communication, signed by Robert E. Caniff, secretary to the Finance Commission, concluded: "The commission will be glad to avail itself of your knowledge."

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Who—could it have been? Nettie whispered between her teeth when she stood alone in the hall, waiting for the door to open. She didn't have any relatives! Who did it?

"Who—could it have been?" Nettie whispered between her teeth when she stood alone in the hall, waiting for the door to open. She didn't have any relatives! Who did it?

The Reception

When she came to the door, she found a group of people waiting for her. They were all looking at her with expressions of surprise and interest. She felt a little nervous, but she forced a smile and stepped forward to greet them.

It Wasn't Fair

She had expected to be a doctor's wife. In her patient and sweet way, she had been told that she would be a doctor's wife. But now, when she stood before them, she felt that it wasn't fair.

Their New Home

"Oh, how I love it," she said, looking at the new home. It was a beautiful house, exactly what she needed. She had been told that it was a good place, and now she knew it was.

Congress Votes In Daisies

DAISIES achieve sophistication! They also go vivacious and daintily bright. A sensational entrance at the Fashion Congress session—and this print frock put the daisy into the new! Chinese red, emerald, chausse and brilliant violet daisies blow along a black ground. The feeling of blitheness and swiftness is carried on in the cut of the frock—the fine crepe sliding around the shoulders and skimming the hips, no into slender lines of grace, then ending in a pleated hem ruffle that bounces as you stride along to show even more of your coppery sheen than the thirteen-inch length allows. Chausse is picked up in the feather flower on the straw bonnet, which plasters its starched, big-mesh veil along the underside of the brim. For the last touch of girliness, you might wear chausse gloves. And the parent leather belt and bag will double the fashion value of your town clothes. Miss Peggy Wright, Brookline designer. For shopping information, call on Frank, or accessories, phone Annie Brink. Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her.

Pellagra Caused by Diet

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.
Pellagra is an annoying disorder of the skin. It is now established to be a vitamin deficiency disease. It is caused by a diet deficient in vitamin G. The disease is most prevalent in some of the southern states. Public health officials are responsible for it. The United States public health service, which found that persons living exclusively on a diet of corn meal, wheat, corn, tomatoes and a number of vegetables and fruits, is concerned in a pure sense of duty.

Bridge Trapping A Doubler

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON
Penalty doubles are often two-edged swords. They may considerably enhance the profit of the doubler, but by placing cards for the guidance of the declarer, they may on the other hand turn a potential profit into a loss.

In today's hand, the declarer was able to negotiate a very neat "trap" play, based entirely on the information conveyed by a pass and double.

Dessert Pitfalls Are Costly

By IDA JEAN KAIN

THE sacred sugars and starches lead you astray! Do you lunch at one of those convenient cafeterias where you must pass an array of tempting carbohydrates, pies, cakes and pastries?

Then you have a struggle to pass the hot breads and muffins. Down the line are portulacans, ham baked in sugar and Southern fried chicken all to tease your failing will-power.

The menu is a list of temptations. You are told that a small amount of carbohydrate is not harmful. But the fact is that a small amount of carbohydrate is not harmful.

Diet Pitfalls

If you want to keep your weight down, you must keep your diet simple. You must keep your diet simple.

Keep your diet simple. Keep your diet simple. Keep your diet simple.

HEARCE FAIRFAX'S ADVICE on LOVE

Is Divorce a National Evil? Win Cash Award With Best Solution to Problem

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Divorce is one of America's biggest problems. It touches the very heart of our civilization—the home. Year after year it grows more widespread. Daily more baffling.

Church and State are fighting divorce with questionable success. Laws against it are enacted. Divorce is denounced. It is proclaimed. Yet, it is constantly more menacing.

Today, as I pondered wearily through volumes of reports and statistics on marriages that failed, the thought occurred to me that somewhere there is a woman or man who can give me 100 words the solution to the divorce problem.

I want to hear from that woman or man. I want to write a long article on the latter Friday. And I want to publish the latter next Wednesday.

The writer will receive a check for five dollars. That will show my appreciation, even though it will fall far short of showing the appreciation of the thousands of happily married men and women who will help.

So write me today all you readers who have a solution. Write me soon. I am possible. And don't see more than 100 words, because we want this letter to be in the black type.

Tomorrow we shall have a lot of letters addressed to the editor. I will select the best of the week. And now, dear readers, here are my letters and answers for today:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX,
I have just been reading the letter from Mrs. A. B. and I should like to offer my solution to her problem.

With old age assistance now being given in this state, I would suggest that they apply to the Bureau of Old Age Assistance in their city or town.

From the bureau will visit them and decide upon a weekly amount to allow them to live in comfort. Mrs. A. B.'s letter leads me to believe both she and her husband are more than 70 years of age. This is one of the requirements for assistance.

Today it is nothing to be ashamed of to ask for help. If it were, it would be far more glorious to do this than "to take another way out," as she suggests.

I believe the limit of 20 years residence in the State has now been reduced to five. If Mrs. A. B. and her husband are not eligible for this assistance, they should apply for outdoor relief.

Pride is never an excuse for suicide. And accepting public aid is no disgrace in a general depression.

FARINA.
I like your letter. You are wise. The five dollar limit today, I like the practical way you face the issue with which this poor couple are faced.

Your information regarding Old Age assistance is interesting, and I know it is going to be of use to Mrs. A. B. and her loyal husband.

Poverty is not disgraceful. Only false pride considers it so. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX,
I am a young girl of 21 and for the past year I've kept company with a married man. The first night I met him he told me that he had a wife. I was so shocked, I didn't know him and had no previous intentions at the time.

But as weeks passed, I grew more fond of him. He was a perfect gentleman and had a most pleasing disposition. I learned that he was in no way to blame for the trouble that parted him and his wife.

Now here is my problem, Miss Fairfax. My friend talks of marriage. He wants a real home and children. He really likes me. But one thing stands in the way. That is his wife. I know that, which prohibits divorce and remarriage.

Am I doing the right thing by leaving this man?
GRACE.

DEAR GRACE,
You're outfitting yourself a life of unhappiness. If a man's religion prohibits divorce and remarriage, it should be obvious to you now that he can never be anything more than a plaything.

Why, dear girl, in view of these facts do you persist in cultivating a relationship that can bring only tears and sorrow to you and him? Do you admit so much?

My advice to you is to end your courtship with this married man. You'd be a far better girl if you would try to be the breach that divides him and his wife. At present you're doing your best to make their separation permanent.

And remember, my child, you can never win the love of a man who is free to marry you and as long as you go about with a married man, BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX,
I am 16 years of age and a sophomore in high school. As I am a stranger here, I have no friends. However, there is a boy in my school who is my very good looking, but brilliant in every way. I want to meet him. I want time to be my friend.

and to take me to movies and dances on formal. If you're giving me the solution to the divorce problem, I will give you invitations?

M. K.
The simplest way to meet this boy would be to go where he goes. At 16 you don't have to stand on formality. If you're watching a basketball game and happen to be sitting near him, comment enthusiastically on one of the players. Of course, he will reply, and very likely he'll add his opinion.

And right there will be your chance. All men assume most girls know little about sports. Take advantage of this opportunity and get him to explain some features of the game. Before you know it, you and he will have become friends.

But about invitations—I'm afraid cannot help you there. They will depend on how you impress the boy. If he likes you, he may volunteer to see you. If he doesn't, he'll probably forget you even exist.

Still, you will have the satisfaction of doing the right thing. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a young man, 19 years of age. About three weeks ago a girl I intended to marry saw me at the railroad station and told me that she had come from Canada to visit us. She assumed that I was taking another girl out, and she has since refused to see me.

What can I do to make her understand? I've called at her home several times, but she always refuses to see me. Every letter I've sent her has been returned unopened. JOHN.

MY DEAR JOHN:
Continue to be courteous to your cousin. She is your family's guest. Let there be nothing wrong in your taking her to movies and dances. Introduce her to your friends. Tell them that she is your cousin. The news will travel.

And here's a word of advice, John. If your girl friend is so interested in you, why don't you give her an opportunity to explain your being in the company of another young woman. Try to forget her. Jealous fancies make a girl's life miserable.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

A Fine Rose Garden

GET A FEW GARDEN TIPS
ROSES everywhere—in borders, on trellises, over the back fence! Roses that bloom all summer long! That's the gardener's dream.

Now is the time to be poring over the flowery pages of garden catalogs, picking out the kind of bushes you want to set out, and getting ahead of the general rush for good plants.

You'll be interested in the new ver-blooming climbing roses, shown in sketches, which give you the advantage of a rose which will grow on a trellis and at the same time give big, long-stemmed roses all summer for cutting.

If you have had a bad winter indoors this winter, don't be too great a hurry to set it out in the garden. Wait until the new leaf out. Then take the new set of the rose, brown the pots, and plant it about a half-inch deeper than it was in the pot.

Your local dealer can tell you what roses will do best in your climate and with your soil. Then get practical help from our 40-page Home Institute book, GARDENING MADE EASY. Here is a noted horticulturist's advice on garden planning, planting around buildings, arranging flower beds, rose garden, rock garden. Detailed advice on soil, fighting plant pests, pruning—all your garden problems.

Prevents Chapped Hands

Preparation
Leaves Skin
Soft, Cool

By ARLENE GOULD
ITS been said that everyone has a favorite song which they never tire of hearing. Or a beloved book which is read again and again—something that goes on and on forever and of which one never grows weary.

This is not only true of books and music and paintings, but of cosmetics as well. Today we nominate a hand bal lotion that is pretty sure to go on and on in favor with the passing years.

It is utterly different from other hand lotions, but if we were asked to analyze it, we couldn't for the life of us tell you why. However, it is instantly soothing and healing in effect, and completely eliminates that feeling of midwinter dryness.

During March comes the realization that Old Man Winter is having his last defiant fling, and spring is "just around the corner." But he is still taking a toll in roughened, dry skin—even into April and sometimes beyond.

Hence, it is well to consider the hands, since it's no secret that they play such an important part in a lovely, well-groomed appearance. And this is certainly the season of year when they suffer most.

You have, of course, heard it said that a woman is as old as her hands. This may be true, but no woman of today need fear that her hands will be rough and old looking if she will spend a few minutes a day treating them with a good hand balm.

Be faithful to hand preparation in fact, and you will have the best of the marriage, have a bottle of lotion in the kitchen, another in the bathroom. In cold weather wear heavy wool gloves. Getting the hands chilled is bad for the cutaneous surface.

The hand balm which we have no hesitations about recommending today is delightfully soft and smooth, milky-white in appearance, almost iridescent looking in fact, and contains ingredients which prevent and cure chapping. Being slightly bleaching it makes the hands delicate and white.

Use it only for the hands, but is grand for ankles that chap under sheer silk stockings, for roughened elbows, and for skin that is sensitive after the bath.

It is called "The Hand Balm" because of its name in this skin balm, which is made in the laboratory of the famous Dr. A. C. G. Co., of New York City, and is sold in a small, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

On Good
Manners

WINNERS KEEPERS
DEAR MISS BECKMAN:
We have a bridge club in our town and the question arises—when we have an invited guest and she gets a highest score, should we give her the prize or should we give the prize to the guest who should have received the prize? I prefer that you have my earnest guest prize?

M.
By all means if you buy the prize she should be given the prize. It will be tremendous respect not to give your guest the prize that she has won. She will be sure to be a member who will be unwilling to accept the prize that rightfully belongs to another, especially to a visitor. And buying a separate guest prize would not be the situation, since this obviously would be a prize that was given to her. It would merely be given.

DICKY'S VERSION
His frankness changed everything. The petty doubt was now only a natural conjecture which he had answered in the affirmative. He still felt that I owed him some amends, and I hastened to do so.

I struggled to a sitting posture and put my hands on his shoulders and said, "You think," I asked reproachfully, "that anything that Edie can say would affect me in my mind? Was it because of her imminent arrival that Dickie was so anxious of telling me about Edie?"

"Yes, she's the one who telephoned me," he said grimly. "She's also the one that sent Edie almost hawtine. Indeed, I'd say that I wouldn't be troubling you with this yarn and explanation tonight if Edie weren't coming tomorrow. I have a hunch that she's all primed to denounce what she considers genuine duck soup to you tomorrow, and naturally I prefer that you have my version first."

His frankness changed everything. The petty doubt was now only a natural conjecture which he had answered in the affirmative. He still felt that I owed him some amends, and I hastened to do so.

"But I do wish to do so," he said, playfully mimicking my sedate tone. "I not only wish, but I'm going to carry the wish into effect right away, so he'll cut your pillow, Dickie, and mix up about the correct position of the pillow," I told him, and he grinned.

Hunt for New Talent

SAMPLE PAGE GUIDES AMATEURS

Interesting people make real news. Write about them if you know them for the Boston Evening American's "Amateur Edition," your page, which starts March 7, and earn some money and win a reputation as a coming writer.

Here's your chance to become amateur staff members of an American Edition sponsored by New England's greatest evening newspaper.

A sample "Amateur Edition" will be placed tomorrow to guide you. Watch for it.

Then, keep your eyes and ears open for an alert response to this invitation to write and sketch. The page is to bring to amateur writers, high school and university students, included, with everything printed on it the products of their efforts.

Writers Paid

And for everything used on the page the Amateur Page Editor will make payment to the author. Most non-professional page at some time or other, and a very small amount to succeed on the line of paper. Here's a last opportunity.

Submit your special talent in whatever form you wish, and let the Amateur Page Editor appraise it. Maybe you can write a column, or sketch scene or fiction, or news angles or draw cartoons, or take photographs. One never knows until one tries.

So go to it, prospective Amateur Staff Members and test your abilities.

Remember the sample page will be printed tomorrow, and the real Amateur Edition, your edition, will be printed Saturday, March 7, and every Saturday thereafter.

After March 7, Friday of each week will be the deadline for receipt of material for use in succeeding issues of the edition. So get busy. Show yourself and your friends that you have ability and then make the most of it.

Be sure to TYPEWRITE your material, and DOUBLE-Space your copy. Address - to the Amateur Page Editor, Boston Evening American, 2 Winthrop Square, Boston.

The name and address of every contributor whose copy is used will be printed.

The Amateur Writing Contest is open.

SECOND BRUND REPRIVE UP TO HOFFMAN

Copyright, 1934, by Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 28 (AP)—An unimpeachable source said today that General David T. Wilson, chief prosecutor of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, will not oppose a second reprieve for the convicted killer of Charles A. Lindbergh.

Wilson, the source said, will neither oppose the reprieve nor suggest a but will stand aside and let Governor Harold G. Hoffman make his own decision whether to deny further Hauptmann's death in the electric chair set for the week of March 30.

Nearly the source and does not believe any new evidence has been developed in the governor's private mind since his decision to discontinue the case. Wilson's disagreement with the views of the trial jury, the court of error and appeals, the Supreme Court of the United States and the New Jersey court of review would not affect the decision in Wilson's opinion.

The governor's latest attack on the case began in 1934, when he ordered a new trial for Hauptmann, who was convicted of the Lindbergh kidnapping in 1934. Wilson, who was then chief prosecutor, had been in the case since the trial.

The source said that Wilson's decision to stand aside was a result of his belief that the case was a "closed book" and that no new evidence would be developed.

WPA CUT MAY COST 100,000 THEIR JOBS

Washington, Feb. 28 (INS)—Orders to cut down on the government's $450,000,000 work-relief program have been issued by Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator.

State administrators who have been providing more than their allotment of jobs under WPA have been instructed to reduce employment to their actual allotments under the program providing for 1,500,000 jobs for employables formerly on the relief rolls.

The program has been providing 1,600,000 persons with jobs, according to Department of Labor reports. Of those, WPA had 200,000 employed at its peak, has dropped to 175,000 now. All other governmental agencies have provided only 275,000 jobs.

The WPA cut-down may cause the discharge of about 100,000 workers throughout the country, a spokesman said today. But as other agencies—WPA, the War Department, navy, commerce and other departments—increased employment on heavy construction projects, WPA will be reduced in proportion.

AUSTEN LAKE

Cronin Names Sox As Protectors Of Phantom Pennant

SARASOTA, FLA., FEB. 28—HERE'S REAL NOVELTY. For fourteen years I have bounced around major league training camps and never, until today, met a manager rash enough to claim a pennant while February's snows were still white in his home park.

But today, Joe Cronin planted his standard firmly over the 1936 League championship, claiming it in the name of King and Country, which, in his case, are words meaning Tom Yawkey and the Red Sox.

This is strangely reminiscent of the little grammar school pictures of my day, sepia wall studies in walnut frames of Christopher Columbus at the moment of annexing the New World for his sovereign, showing him with doublet and hose awash in the surf and raising his sword to the angels to witness his claim under the old law of findies-keepies.

Cronin's big moment was not so spectacular, merely finding him shrugged down on a fender sofa, saying that he and his men would defend the 1936 pennant and, of course, each player's individual claim of the series purse as a kind of championship—absentia, against any interloper who was brazen enough to think themselves as a likelier outlier.

This, too, sets the little gears of historic memory a-meshing, refuting stories of Chinamen's golden age, when they starvelingly belabored in sheet metal, put pretty ladies' sleeves in their helmets, and rode around hacking hunks off everybody in the pathetic belief that they were defending a relic and an imaginary championship.

Champions From Flag Fall to Finish

HERE, FOR THE FIRST TIME in major league record, is a club defending a championship that it has not yet won.

But, as Cronin hastened to add, in self-justice, why should he remain conspicuous as the only Boston player, if only a kind of courtier to Boston himself, out of San Francisco by way of Washington, who has not already conceded the Sox the phantom title.

This is sporting of Joe, who has lots of gristle in his jaw, because he is deliberately putting himself on the griddle, where, if he fails to deliver his promise, he is apt to be incensed a rich gray brown.

But he said, he would gladly risk trying just to squint a pennant ring into his players, who, he thinks, may strike a little harder if inoculated with flag fever than if they thought they were just taking a pleasure ride to nowhere.

And he said, when his athletes were all here, by March 6, he would tell them frankly that, barring the inherent risks of the game like fractures and illness, nothing less than a title would satisfy him and that it was up to them, and himself, to think of themselves not as ball players, but as protectors of the championship until otherwise notified.

Werber to Start Season at Third

I HAVE NEVER MET a more earnest, industrious chap than Cronin, who, if he is as winning on the field this year as he is winsome in manner, ought to wind up first in the league and first in the hearts of his fans.

At the age of 36, the grizzled leader of baseball's most expensive outfit, he has melted off some ten pounds of himself during the winter, a vigil of fasting and exercise that has left him slightly haggard, so that his last year uniform pants sag plentifully at the waist-line and recall the medium-sized rookies who need to come to camp and wear Dale Alexander's, or Smad Jolley's, or the Boone's cast off clothes and go swimming about the field like puppies tangled in a hammock.

An obliging cuss, is Joe, too, who, by request, guessed his opening day batting order as follows: Cooke or Almada, rf; Cramer, cf; Manush, lf; Fox, 1b; Cronin, ss; McNeil or Melillo, 2b; Werber, 3d, and Rick Ferrell, c.

In the picture because he felt that the cocky youngster rounded out what might mean eight 300 hits in the pen, and nine when Werber was pitching, a dream-goal never yet attained in the game's history.

And he said, while the Red Sox were rated as a four-run team last season, the average number of corners scored per game, they should measure up to a six-run or better outfit this season.

Griff Waiting There to Catch It

IN COMPANY with many pitchers, whose development, if not arrested, is at least retarded above the shoulders, Johnny Marcum required time for the idea to percolate that he could not lose $7500 worth of bonus rights on his mountain farm and so, while the harvest was still good, he had better pitch $7500 worth of baseball.

In discussing Walter Johnson's recent feat of throwing a silver dollar across the baseball park, in emulation of George Washington's failed feat, one of the older recruits said he bet Clark Griffith, Washington owner, noted for his rigid economies, was waiting on the other side to catch the coin. Then, suddenly realizing that Griffith was his own manager-parent by marriage, the athlete beamed, pleased to be admitted to the club.

Herb Pennock, antiquated pitching master, is here to tutor the kids in upper-class mound arts. He spends his time posturing in the pitching pits and instructing the scholars how to stand on the rubber, peg caddy over a shoulder toward first base, and heave the ball quickly with a minimum of leg, back and shoulder.

As Pennock does it, it seems a childishly simple trick. But, as some of the rookies do it, it looks like the married men in the annual picnic game at the Ladies' Missionary Clambake.

DANNO, YVON CONFIDENT

By Jack Conway

Dan O'Mahony's title as world heavyweight wrestling champion will hang in the balance tonight, when he breezes into action against the youthful and brilliant Yvon Robert in a finish bout at a Paul Bowser show at the Garden.

The greatest gathering to jam the Garden for any sports event during the present indoor season will be on hand when Dan and Yvon collide.

It is expected that the tussle will be witnessed by more than 15,000 persons.

O'Mahony and Robert are both in superb physical condition, and Herb Fier, Holland, vs. Herman Hirsch, Holland.

(First bout at 8:15. Main event at 10 o'clock.)

neither will be in a position to offer an able if defeated.

It will be a battle between two youngsters who have skyrocketed to fame in the wrestling game.

Danno is 23, while the challenger is 21.

Each possesses the set of traits that will enable them to set a terrific pace every second they are in the ring.

There is a bitter feud between O'Mahony and Robert. It started at Holyoke when the French Canadian heavyweight hopped into a car with Robert and tossed Dan into an impromptu match.

Jack McDonald, O'Mahony's manager, later insisted the Irishman would never fight Robert a crack at his title. Public opinion, however, forced McGrath to change rear.

O'Mahony has been in Boston since last Saturday. He finished his training at Buckle's Gym, and since then he has been in perfect form, while he displayed tremendous power.

Robert also sprang during his training session. He is now in perfect form, and is expected to set a fast pace from the start.

Under American Association wrestling rules, there is a two-hour time limit to the match, but it is unlikely it will last that long.

O'Mahony and Robert are so bitter against each other that the tussle is unlikely to go the limit.

Each promises to win in straight falls, and each promises to win in straight falls.

The semifinal has Nick Latta against Count Polowski. In the preliminary, Hans Klein, Germany, vs. Don Patterson, Syracuse.

Count Polowski, North Grafton, vs. John Spelman, Providence.

Art Legrand, Montreal, vs. Don Coo, Cleveland.

Jack Washburn, California, vs. Herbie Olsen, Minnesota.

Herb Fier, Holland, vs. Herman Hirsch, Holland.

"Till Win"

By DAN O'MAHONY
(Champion)

I am in the best condition of my entire career and can see no reason why I should not beat him. I have a great, real, but he simply is not in my class.

I expect to pay him in full tonight for the way he has embarrassed me.

By YVON ROBERT
(Challenger)

I will be the new heavyweight champion of the world after the match. I've never before felt so confident.

I fear that deep in his heart Danno fears me. He dodged me until I could dodge no longer, and was forced to defend his title against me.

I did not work yesterday, because I was paid for a perfect show after Wednesday's work. Danno is a great wrestler and has been a fine champion, but he will be in there against a greater wrestler tonight.

Demand Resignation Of Racing Board

Massachusetts today was threatened with a vigorous attack on 1936 horse and dog racing plans in the wake of charges of fraud and illegality hurled at state officials and track promoters.

Highlights of the situation are:

1—Demand that Governor Curley fire the State racing commission in a body if they refuse to resign voluntarily.

2—Threat of court action to prevent issuance of licenses to last year's license holders if they reapply.

3—Claims that Massachusetts bettors have been "mugged" out of thousands of dollars through trick wording in the law relative to "breakage."

4—Charges that track employees have been forced to pay illegal fees and other charges on threat of losing their jobs.

Imprisoned by the new racing law, the "mug" of dollars invested in horse tracks at Suffolk Downs, Agawam and dog tracks at Rivers, Lynn and West Springfield.

FATHER, Three Sons Pick SOX TEAM

It's easy to see why baseball holds such a warm spot in the affections of thousands after reading some of the letters accompanying selections in the Red Sox contest being conducted by the Boston Evening American-Union Advertiser.

Manuel Corcoran, of 22 Bond street, Somerville, encloses his own opening day lineup opinions and those of his three young sons, James, Joseph and John. All of them are different.

Manuel writes as follows:

"Please accept these four entries. These are from my sons. They are young but very good fans. They can hardly wait for the opening game."

"They have already started begging me to take them. Of course I don't like the thought of going. No. NOT MICHIE!"

John Trembridge, Dexter of 323 Adams street, Milton, writes:

"I am so mad about baseball that I can't wait for the papers. I rip the baseball pages out of each paper and fairly eat them up."

Keep a notebook with all the stories and pictures and am already well into my seventh scrapbook now."

Henry R. Askew, 49 Elm street, Boston, writes:

"In fact his choice look pretty fair at this stage of the game. For the sake of getting a line on someone persons feel is a pretty fair bet, I print his lineup for opening day."

A Lucky Escape

Adventurer Drives Auto Into Face Of Thrilling Experience

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Our new adventurer today, boys and girls, is none other than Dominick Rutigliano of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dominick comes to us with a story of circumstantial evidence and how it almost got him into jail and worse. Personally, I think very few innocent men get convicted under our legal system which protects an innocent man more than any other country's laws. In fact, it seems to me that more guilty persons get off than innocent ones get in. And that's the way it should be.

Back in November, 1934, Dominick was a night telegraph operator for the Western Union. One drizzly cold night when he started home about 1 o'clock in the morning he got a yen for a hot dog and drove to Coney Island, which is near his home. The inner man satisfied, Dominick headed his car for home and was rolling along the wet streets when adventure tapped him on the shoulder.

A young lady stood on a street corner waiting for a street car. Dominick says she wasn't bid to look at it and seemed a victim to a pretty girl in the rain on such a night. Consequently our hero pulled up at the curb and asked the maiden in distress if he could drive her home. Of course he could and did. She climbed into the car with a grateful smile. Street cars were few and far between at that late hour.

As the car rolled along the wet streets, Dominick's pretty hitchhiker told him that she was a maid employed in Sea Gate, a private colony at the end of Coney Island. Dominick didn't bother to ask her name. After all he was just doing his kind deed for the day and had no intention of renewing his acquaintance. Later he wished he had. Not knowing the young lady's name was destined to get the young man into a very tight spot.

The car arrived at the private gate of Sea Gate without a mishap. The watchman who is generally at the gate was absent but the young lady said it was all right to enter so Dominick drove right into the private roadway as though he lived there. About a block inside his fair passenger asked him to stop. He did and she got out explaining that she worked in one of the houses across the street but did not say which one. Dominick didn't mind. He was not inquisitive and didn't even notice which house the girl entered.

As he turned the car around to leave the way he had entered Dominick noticed a small group of people standing in the roadway. The group seemed to notice him too and started pointing at him. Dominick figured that the best thing he could do would be to get out of this private place, so he speeded up for the gate. But, by golly, as he reached it two policemen with drawn guns suddenly jumped out and commanded him to halt.

Dominick slammed on his brakes and stopped. The policemen got in the car alongside of him and ordered him to drive back to the group he had seen in the road. Dominick complied and as he drew up to the curb he noticed several angry citizens eyeing him and his car narrowly. One of the policemen got out and spoke to a man who looked like a watchman. The man was the night safe watchman.

The watchman stared at Dominick and said he had never seen him before. Several men whom Dominick took to be residents of the colony also shook their heads at the policeman's whispered question.

Dominick says he couldn't imagine what the whole thing was about until the policemen dragged him out of the car and parading the small crowd pointed to something that lay on the road. Dominick looked down and gasped.

The body of a young girl lay bleeding on the road. It didn't take a second glance to see that she was dead. Now Dominick says he can't stand the sight of blood and he recoiled instinctively with horror. He says he must have gone pale. He knew his conscience was clear but he felt guilty and he knew his actions were suspicious from the stern glances that met his eyes on all sides.

The policemen wasted no time but openly accused him of being the hit-and-run driver who had killed the girl and had come back to the scene of his crime. A witness had seen a car of the same make as Dominick's enter the gate. No car had left since the accident and the conclusion was obvious. Dominick protested his innocence.

"But what are you doing here?" the police asked. Dominick told them but when asked the name and address of the girl he had driven home he couldn't tell them.

That was enough for the late citizens. They began edging up to him with blood in their eyes. Dominick got behind the policemen and nervously tried to explain. But the more he talked the more he seemed to convince them that he was the man.

Things were looking awfully tough for the young telegraph operator. The father of the dead girl was there and he talked of taking the law into his own hands. Dominick started to feel homicide afraid. More people kept arriving and murmuring against him. He glanced down again at the mutilated body lying on the street and shuddered.

But something caught his eye. He stooped over and picked up a piece of glass, and that piece of glass may have saved Dominick's life. At least it saved him from a night in jail.

It was a piece of a broken headlight. Dominick pointed to his own headlight. They were intact. He suggested that the car had struck the girl and tried to make a dash. They took him along and there in the community garage was a car like Dominick's with a broken headlight.

That was the end of Dominick's ordeal. The man who owned the car was found and when questioned readily confessed. And Dominick—well, Dominick now has a watchman's pass and he never picked up another hitchhiker if it was raining pitchforks!

It's been raining stories, boys and girls, in my office lately but I'm still waiting for that thrill of YOURS. Send it in now and earn a membership in the only club in the world that pays you to join. Tomorrow I've a great yarn for you. Until then, SO LONG.

Floyd Gibbons, America's Ace Headline Hunter, globe trotter and adventurer, wants to hear the story of the greatest thrill of your life. He believes everyone has had at least one adventure that other people would like to hear about, so he is bringing adventurers together from all parts of the world into a city-side adventurers' club and forum for the swapping of yarns. Floyd will pay ten dollars for each story he prints in his column, and a hundred dollar bill goes to the writer of the best yarn of the month. For further details see the next column.

HOW TO WIN

$100.00

And Membership In The Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club

Here's the only rule. YOUR STORY MUST BE TRUE. Any one who has ever had a thrill is eligible to compete. Don't worry about how well you can write, but be sure name and address are legible. Floyd will collaborate with you and whip your story into shape. Just write the facts of your biggest adventure and mail them to Floyd Gibbons, care of the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston. Keep a copy of your letter as NO STORY CAN BE RETURNED. Do not send valuable pictures or souvenirs. Just send the FACTS.

NEW ENGLAND

Weather

IMPEDED Trade

By Hugh E. Bradshaw
Accurate portrayal of the New England business picture still depends on prominent placing of transportation.

As weather conditions improve free movement of rail and water borne traffic stimulate many lines of trade and industry.

While this section did well to hold its position last week, a small drop in electric output, natural retail trade, fair wool and cash reports indicated the current week should show up much better after a week of weather grip. At the same time, the coming of milder weather would witness an obvious movement in building operations necessary to further New England recovery in 1926.

The current First National Bank & Boston New England Letter contains some interesting comment on federal government spending.

We found the picture of the railway significant.

In the final analysis, debt capacity is determined by the ability and willingness to make payments to meet the obligations of the government in relation to the public. When a government is unable to make payments to the public, it is unable to bridge the gap between taxation and expenditure by means of taxation or through borrowing, then the only recourse is to print money or start the printing press.

Those who insist that the federal debt is too much for the federal government to handle, and that it should be extended, are not really saying what they mean. It is not the debt itself, but the expenditure of money to pay the interest on the debt which has come across.

Bits of Gossip: McCallahan's new glowing lines that talk of an annual dividend increase of one dollar a share, only natural. General Motors, for the first time in its history, is said to be in a position to close its books for the year in the red.

The market didn't go up on Thursday as much as it had on Wednesday, but it was a very welcome development. Following collection of the week's taxes, a necessary measure of secondary action is a necessary condition of the market. It is well to remember that the market is not a perfect machine, and that it is not a perfect machine.

Netbook: Farm equipment shares seem to be on their heels. The market is not a perfect machine, and that it is not a perfect machine.

Boatmen: The market is not a perfect machine, and that it is not a perfect machine.
